HAY-BOND

TREATY.

President Heard Fishing Interest Yesterday.

NEW ENGLANDERS PRESENT.

Collector Jordan and Messrs. Cunningham and Dustin Attend.

A Washington despatch to the Boston Herald yesterday, says:

"The administration is making a determined effort to secure the ratification of the Hay-Bond treaty, providing for reciprocity between the United States and Newfoundland, which especially affects the fishing interests of the New England coast.

"Recently the President has expressed strong indorsement of this convention, and has caused it to be known that it would be gratifying to the administration should it be favorably acted upon by the senate. When this fact became known, the fishing interests of New England, apposed to the treaty, entered protests, and this opposition was strengthened today by statements made to the President and the New England senators and representatives generally by a delegation from Massachusetts and Maine who are fighting the convention.

"The delegation consisted of William H. Jordan, collector of the port at Gloucester; Sylvester Cunningham, president of the board of trade at Gloucester; John K. Dustin, owner of fishing vessels at Gloucester; and Capt. T. M. Nicholson of Bucksport and A. A. Nickerson of Boothbay, Me. These gentlemen, representing opposition to the treaties, conferred with Senators Hale, Lodge and others today, and subsequently called upon the president to lay their views before him.

"Their argument is to the effect that free fish from Newfoundland will be of material detriment to the fishing industry of New England, and that the ratification of the pending treaty will disrupt the protection afforded by the Dingley law. The president, being acquainted with this opposition, was of the opinion that perhaps an agreement might be reached whereby provisions could be made, differentiating in the various grades of fish sought to be imported free of duty in a manner that would protect the New England industry.

"The delegation was accompanied to the White House by Senator Lodge and Representative Gardner of Massachusetts and Senator Hale and Representative Littlefield of Maine.

"The President is especially desirous that the treaty shall be reported from committee, and to this attitude has the support of Senator Cullon, chairman of the committee. There is no indication of an immediate report, favorable or unfavorable, and the treaty will probably not be acted upon this session.
